

LI Kids Father's Day Gift Guide 2010

---

Finding something for Dad can be hard whether you're a kid or an adult. So many factors can come into play. Regardless, there are some universal truths. Among them, dad probably doesn't need anything you can pick up in a frenzy at a drug or dollar store, and he certainly doesn't want that light up tie with the palm tree on it. I'm not sure why they made that thing in the first place, but dad...he doesn't want it. Here is a list of great products he might want though!

De Odor Works

While we recommend this one, we also recommend that you might want to treat this one with kid gloves. Don't make it the only gift you give, otherwise dad might get the wrong idea! De Odor Works is the only (to my knowledge) stainless steel deodorizer. That's right, you just run it under water and you rub it on your problem areas and that's it. You don't need to use deodorant and you remain clean smelling until the next shower. For health conscious dads this is great because it reduces the need for deodorant, which can cause potential health problems and in some cases isn't great for the environment. It's also great for the spend thrift dad, because De Odor Works doesn't have to be purchased several times a month like deodorant might. We were skeptical but we tried it and it really works. This makes for a great, inexpensive gift add-on for dad this year.

For more info, visit De Odor Works.

Written by Ashtyn Evans - Visit Website

---

Ashtyn is in her early 30s. She is a mother, writer, college student, and music lover. Ashtyn has had a successful career as a writer since 2003. She turned to blogging in 2005. Ashtyn attends Wright State where she is getting a degree in Psychology. She has extensive knowledge in SEO and Social Media Development.