

Sounds Good: Steel shower; I'm not making this up (<http://panews.com/darraghdoiron/x1778839416/Sounds-Good-Steel-shower-I-m-not-making-this-up>)

Darragh Doiron
The Associated Press (<http://panews.com>)

— Showering with steel; I'm not making this up

While I'm drawn to weird, or at least novel, I wonder if readers think I'm making stuff up.

Y'all can Google this one for proof. De Odor Works is an ergonomically -shaped bar of medical-grade stainless steel you use like a bar of soap in the shower, instead of deodorant. It works under running water to remove body odor from armpits, feet, etc. Keep it in the shower, forever. It won't rust or tarnish.

I believed this right away, because for years I've seen small versions designed for cooks to remove the garlic smell from their hands. First, I like the smell of garlic. Then I figured you could use a spoon, if it was a problem. But De Odor Works is something else entirely. It's something else cool, fun, and green for those wanting to avoid chemicals in deodorant.

That's all I have to say about that. Call 1-888-874-8219 to prove me right, that this crazy steel bar exists.